Welcome Message

Dear Colleagues,

On behalf of the Organizing Committee, we are delighted to invite you to the 10th SARPS Congress on Pain, organized by the Indian Society for the Study of Pain (ISSP) in collaboration with the International Association for the Study of Pain (IASP). This prestigious event includes multiple academic activities scheduled as follows: the Pain Camp from 22nd to 24th September 2025, the Refresher Course and Pre-Conference Workshop on 25th September 2025, and the Main Conference from 26th to 27th September 2025. All these activities will take place in the vibrant city of Delhi, India.

The theme of this year's congress, "Patient Centric Pain Management" underscores the importance of holistic and collaborative approaches to pain management across diverse healthcare settings.

This conference aims to bring together experts, researchers, and practitioners to discuss innovative strategies, share knowledge, and strengthen the network for pain study.

The event will feature an exciting academic program, including keynote addresses, orations, scientific sessions (oral and poster presentations), awards, workshops, and more. It promises to be a platform for meaningful discussions and advancements in the field of pain management.

Delhi, the capital of India, offers a rich blend of history, culture, and culinary delights, providing the perfect backdrop for this enriching experience.

We look forward to welcoming you to SARPS 2025 and to collectively advancing the field of pain study and care.

How To Reach Delhi

By Air

The primary airport serving Delhi is the Indira Gandhi International Airport (DEL), which is one of the busiest airports in India. It is well-connected to major cities across India and the world, with regular flights from Mumbai, Bangalore, Chennai, Kolkata, Hyderabad, Pune, Jaipur, Ahmedabad, and international destinations.

By Rail

Delhi is a major railway hub with several key railway stations, including New Delhi Railway Station (NDLS), Old Delhi Railway Station (DLI), and Hazrat Nizamuddin Railway Station (NZM). Trains are available from almost every major city in India, such as Mumbai, Kolkata, Chennai, Bangalore, Hyderabad, Ahmedabad, Jaipur, and Lucknow.

By Road

Delhi is well-connected by a network of national highways and motorable roads. Regular bus services (both state-run and private) operate from nearby cities like Jaipur (280 km), Chandigarh (250 km), Agra (230 km), and Dehradun (250 km). Additionally, Delhi is connected to major cities such as Mumbai (1,420 km), Kolkata (1,530 km), Bangalore (2,170 km), and Hyderabad (1,580 km) via well-maintained highways.

RED FORT

The Red Fort is a historical fortification in the old Delhi area. Shah Jahan constructed it in the year 1639 as a result of a capital shift from Agra to Delhi. Used as the main residence of the emperors of the Mughal dynasty, this imposing piece of architecture derives its name from its impregnable red sandstone walls. In addition to accommodating the emperors and their households, it was the ceremonial and political centre of the Mughal state and the setting for events critically impacting the region. Today, this monument is home to several museums that have an assortment of precious artefacts on display. Every year, the Indian Prime Minister unfurls the national flag here on the Independence Day.

QUTUB MINAR

Qutub Minar is a minaret or a victory tower located in Qutub complex, a UNESCO World Heritage Site in Delhi's Mehrauli area. With the height of 72.5 metres (238 ft), Qutub Minar is the second tallest monument of Delhi. Its construction was started in 1192 by Qutb Ud-Din-Aibak, founder of Delhi Sultanate after he defeated the last Hindu Ruler of Delhi. He constructed the basement, after which the construction was taken over by his son-in-law and successor Iltutmish who constructed three additional stories. The fourth and fifth storeys were built by Firoz Shah Tuglak.

LOTUS TEMPLE

Located in the national capital of New Delhi, the Lotus Temple is an edifice dedicated to the Baha'i faith. The magnificent structure of this building unfolds in the form of a stupendous white petal lotus and is one of the most visited establishments in the world. The design of this shrine was conceptualized by Canadian architect Fariborz Sahba and was completed in the year 1986. This temple seeks to propagate the oneness of the Almighty and is open to all regardless of their nationality, religion, race or gender. The Lotus temple is one of the seven Baha'i House of Worship present around the world. As you enter the complex of the temple, you encounter an enchanting entrance gate, beautiful floral gardens and scintillating pools. The pathway leading up to the temple doors is lined with lush green shrubs and a feeling of tranquillity adorns the atmosphere despite the bubbling crowd.

INDIA GATE

The All India War Memorial, popularly known as the India Gate, is located along the Rajpath in New Delhi. The imposing structure of India Gate is an awe-inspiring sight and is often compared to the Arch de Triomphe in France, the Gateway of India in Mumbai and the Arch of Constantine in Rome. This 42-meter tall historical structure was designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens and is one of the largest war memorials in the country. India Gate is also famous for hosting the Republic Day Parade every year. Dedicated to 82,000 Indian and British soldiers who died during the First World War and the Third Anglo-Afghan War, this monument has the names of 13,300 servicemen inscribed on its surface.

About Delhi

Delhi, the vibrant capital of India, is a city that seamlessly blends the old and the new, offering a rich tapestry of history, culture, and modernity. As one of the oldest continuously inhabited cities in the world, Delhi is a living testament to India's diverse heritage, with its roots tracing back to ancient times. The city is divided into two distinct parts: Old Delhi and New Delhi. Old Delhi, with its narrow winding lanes, bustling bazaars, and historic landmarks, exudes an old-world charm. The iconic Red Fort, Jama Masjid, and Chandni Chowk are quintessential experiences, offering a glimpse into the Mughal era. New Delhi, on the other hand, is a planned city designed by British architects in the early 20th century. It is characterized by wide boulevards, grand government buildings, and lush green spaces. The India Gate, Rashtrapati Bhavan, and Humayun's Tomb are some of the architectural marvels that define this part of the city. Delhi is also a cultural hub, hosting numerous festivals, art exhibitions, and performances throughout the year. The city's culinary scene is equally diverse, ranging from street food like chaat and parathas to fine dining experiences.

Delhi is a city of contrasts, where ancient monuments stand alongside modern skyscrapers, and traditional markets coexist with sprawling malls. It is a melting pot of cultures, languages, and traditions, making it a microcosm of India itself. Despite its challenges, such as pollution and overcrowding, Delhi continues to captivate visitors with its energy, resilience, and timeless allure. Whether you're exploring its historic sites, savoring its cuisine, or simply soaking in its vibrant atmosphere, Delhi promises an unforgettable experience.
